Dear Birth Mother,

Thank you for taking the time to learn about our family and the life we can provide for your child. We know this must be an emotional and difficult time for you and we want you to know that our thoughts are with you as you move forward to choose the right parents for your child. Please know you will forever remain a part of your child. Your child will always know that every decision you made was out of love and with their best interest at heart. We will always admire you for making the courageous decision to let us parent your child. We will make this commitment to you that we will give your child unconditional, unending love, support and happiness. We could never begin to express to you our eternal gratitude for this amazing gift which you have given to us.

Let us begin the story of Pam & Warren. We would like to tell you about ourselves, our families and our hopes for the future. We met each other over 12 years ago at college. We saw each other across a crowded hallway and knew we had to meet. After dating for two years we got engaged at the delight of all our family & friends. We were engaged for two years and in November 1998 we proclaimed our love to each other in front of all our family & friends and most importantly God. We were married in the church both of us were members and where Warren found his current faith. We both always had faith in the Lord that he would guide us on the right path. Warren grew up Baptist and Pam grew up Catholic. We always held similar religious beliefs even though we practiced different religions. Warren thought it would be easier for our children if we practiced one. In May 1997, Warren was baptized into the Catholic religion. We spent our honeymoon on a cruise of the Mexican Riviera because we really enjoy the warmth, learning about different cultures, and meeting new people. Traveling is a passion we both share and we try to get in many mini trips throughout the year. To our family & friends we are famous for our "trips", either a driving excursion, plane trip or visiting family/friends out of state, one thing is true, we like to keep it fun and we can't wait to share this passion with a child of our own.

Our married life together has brought us closer than we could have ever imagined. We know that we have a lifelong partner in each other to give eternal love, support, and loyalty. Our relationship has brought out the best qualities in both of us. For instance, Pam is a caring, compassionate, loving, creative person with a good sense of self, whom will help anyone in need. She always looks on the bright side and can always lend encouragement when needed. Warren is easy-going, reliable, fun-loving, a generous spirit with a good sense of humor. Warren will drop anything to help family and friends. Family always comes first and he never hesitates when someone calls on him.

Our marriage is enjoyable because we share several similar interests but also keep our individual interests intact. We love to go to movies, concerts, go on long walks, play games, gardening and entertaining friends, family and their children. Pam enjoys crafting, stamping, shopping with friends and reading. Warren also likes to read, go to outside sporting events with our nephews, socializing with our neighbors and playing with our dog Gypsy Rose. Gypsy is a 2 year old female Miniature Dachshund. She has a lot of energy, very playful, friendly, and most importantly loving. Gypsy Rose will be a great friend to our child because she loves to play and run around with our nieces, nephews, cousins and friends children. Whenever they come to visit she never sits still. She is on the go as much as all the kids are.

Since we married we have known we wanted to become parents and share our love and life with a child. We have been trying for a couple years to have children but sadly due to infertility problems we are unable to. We have dreamt of holding a child of our own, reading bedtime stories, having our child play amongst all our families' children, birthday parties and watching our child's face light up on Christmas morning. We both have memories as children of family vacations, holidays, birthdays and spending time with our parents and family. For us, the holidays mean family time and we cannot wait to share our child with the rest of our family. We hope to create similar memories for our child to have. We were both raised in families with two loving parents. Our parents were hard-working people that taught us the difference between good and bad by example. Our parents both worked and showed us how to juggle family and work and still have a loving, fun and Christian home. By adjusting their work schedules and having help from family we were always well taken care of. After much thought, we made the decision to adopt a child in hopes our dream of becoming parents and a family could come true.

Our families are very happy, & excited that we will be able to become parents by adopting. They are supportive of our decision to adopt and will be forever grateful to our child's birth parents for the courageous choice they made. Both of our parents already have grandchildren but they are eagerly awaiting the addition of another picture on their walls with our child. Warren's brother Larry and wife Deana have two children Noah and Skyler. They cannot wait to be called aunt and uncle and have plenty of love to share with their new niece or nephew. Warren's mom cannot wait to hold another baby in her arms. It is just a joy for her to be with her grand kids. Sadly Warren's father passed away several years ago and we know he will be sending our child much love. Pam's brother

Mark and wife Missy also have two children Maegan and Dylan. They have patiently waited for us to add onto our family and are very excited for a new little face in our family. Pam's parents are thrilled to have another grandchild to love and babysit. Our extended family includes a multitude of aunts, uncles, & cousins with plenty of children ranging from 6 months to 21 years old.

We hope that you will find comfort in knowing we will always love and care for your child putting their needs above our own. We have so much to offer a child since we were both raised in loving homes and we would love the chance to share all of that and more with a child. We look forwards to all the challenges of parenthood, from sleepless nights, to first steps and more. We plan on sharing your child's adoption story with them as early and as often as possible. The importance of sharing your child's story with them at a young age is to create an atmosphere in our family in which adoption will be discussed honestly. We are also creating an adoption book which tells the story of why we wanted to adopt a child and how through a miracle, called a birth parent, the child was brought into our lives. We consider the honor of becoming parents through adoption to be the greatest gift you and life have given us.

If you would like, we would love to meet with you and answer any questions you have. You will always be a special part of our child's life. Our child will always know the importance of their birth parent and we always be happy to communicate, send letters and pictures.

You will always hold a special place in our hearts, thoughts, and prayers.

With love & admiration,
Warren & Pam
